4. Iziko South African Museum

Over the last 200 years, scientists at the South African Museum have been adding to the collection of almost two million items. At a very affordable price, you can view specimens ranging from over 700 million years old to as recent as a few days old.

Route: 101 or 111

Closest stop: Michaelis

5. The Company's Garden

Situated adjacent to Parliament, the Company's Garden was established by the Dutch East India Company in 1652. Here you will discover a fine selection of trees, lawns, a popular restaurant, a rose garden, and heritage vegetable gardens. It also houses the South African National Art Gallery, Iziko South African Museum and the Planetarium. The garden also offers free Wi-Fi.

Route: 106, 107 or 113

Closest stop: Groote Kerk

6. District Six Museum

District Six was a densely populated suburb near the city centre. Due to the infamous apartheid-era Group Areas Act, the site was identified for forced removals. The museum tells the story of that time and houses memorabilia and artefacts from former residents.

Route: 101, 103, 104 or 111

Closest stop: Lower Buitenkant

7. City Hall and the Nelson Mandela Statue

After being freed from his 27-year incarceration, Nelson Mandela made his first public speech on 11 February 1990 from the City Hall balcony. To commemorate this pivotal moment in South Africa's journey to democracy, a statue of this great leader was erected on the very same balcony.

Route: 102 or 112

Closest stop: Darling

8. The Castle of Good Hope

Built in 1659, the Castle of Good Hope is South Africa's oldest colonial building. When built it was on the edge of the city's shoreline. Today it houses a military museum, William Fehr's collection of paintings and the Cape Town Highlanders Regiment.

Route: 102, 112 or 261

Closest stop: The Castle or Castle

9. Church Square, Iziko Slave Lodge and The Slave Tree

In the 1700s Cape Town was home to many slaves. The Iziko Slave Lodge, which used to house slaves, has an exhibition called "human wrongs to human rights". On historic Church Square nearby there's a memorial to slavery and a plaque marking the tree under which slaves were auctioned.
